

Moving Day

An easy read guide

There are lots of things to do once you have a date to move into your house or flat.

You could start by packing some bits and pieces that you won't need every day like books and ornaments.

Make sure you have plenty of strong boxes in different sizes.

You can buy them or ask friends and family if they have any.

Pack up rooms together and label the boxes like kitchen and bedroom.

It makes it much easier on moving day. You can put the boxes straight in each room.

Ask friends and family if they can help you on moving day.

The more help you have the faster and easier you can get it done.

You could get a removal company or hire a van if you have lots of big stuff.

Remember you will have to pay for them though.

You might find that you can get all your stuff in a big car, or do a few trips in a smaller car.

You could also ask friends that might have vans if they could help.

Try to have packed up most of your things before moving day.

You can then start moving stuff as soon as you have the keys to your new home.

Move the big stuff first like beds, fridges and wardrobes.

You will then be able to unpack things straight in to them.

You will probably be very tired by the end of the day so make sure you have made your bed up so you can just fall into it

If you have labelled all your boxes it should be easy to put them in each room.

Ask a friend or family member if they can start to unpack boxes while you are moving the big stuff.

Make sure your kettle and mugs are easy to find so you can have a cuppa!

It is a good idea to buy something that is quick to make for tea or you could just get a takeaway if there is one nearby.

If you have a lot of stuff it might take you a while to unpack everything.

Try to do the stuff you need every day first and leave the other things until later.

You might find that you move your furniture round a lot until it looks right.

It can take weeks before you feel settled and have your home just how you want it.

You will need to get all the bills for the house put in your name.

You will need to contact the gas, electricity, water and tell them your details.

You also need to tell other people like broadband, sky or cable and so on if you have them.

The gas and electricity company will ask you for a meter reading.

It's easy if you know where the meter is. Ask the landlord to tell you.

You must also contact your local council to have your name put on the council tax bill and the electoral register so you can vote.

Here are some useful questions to ask before you move into your new home:

Where is the main stopcock to turn off the water?

Where are the gas and electricity meters?

What day are the bins emptied?

Where is the thermostat for the heating?

Once you have moved you will need to tell people your new address. Here are a few ideas of people you need to tell:

Family and friends

Doctor

Dentist

Bank

Employer

Benefit office

School

TV Licensing
